

GovEvents Launches Portal for Government Events
New Website Available for Government and Industry Professionals
Searching for Event Information

Washington, DC – November 17, 2009 GovEvents launched today a portal for government-related events. The site provides in-depth information on a wide variety of events, from major industry tradeshows, to government conferences, to agency-sponsored roundtables, and webcasts.

“Thousands of agency, association, industry, and vendor sponsored shows in the government marketplace take place every year and are advertised on a myriad of websites,” said Kerry Rea, president of GovEvents. “However, there is not one location that aggregates the information for easy searching and browsing, GovEvents was created as a service to the government community to fill that void.”

GovEvents helps federal, state and local government employees as well as the industries that serve those audiences. Wading through multiple sites to find the event that is the right fit for professional development or business networking is challenging. GovEvents provides a comprehensive event listing and search source to help with professional development, networking, and knowledge sharing. Industry users can also use GovEvents to look for events to attend, exhibit, and sponsor. The portal is free of charge for Government employees, event organizers, and industry users.

GovEvents obtains its event information from multiple sources, combining targeted search capabilities, human collection, and RSS feeds. More than 100 sources have been vetted to ensure the data integrity of the portal. In addition, there is a user-contributed capability whereby government agencies, event organizers, and industry can post event information that is applicable to the GovEvents audience. New events can be added by registering on the Web site and following a simple step-by-step process. The ability to enhance existing event listings is also an option available at no cost.
